“The Caribbean, beyond the Coasts --The Rural World”
Montería (Colombia), 25-27 March 2015

1st Annual Conference of the Colombian Association for Caribbean Studies
(ACOLEC)

Montería (Colombia), 25-27 March 2015

PRESENTATION

Last decades have seen the consolidation of new capitalist systems of production quite distinct from traditional productive systems that were common in the rural world. Perhaps the most outstanding, in the context of the Greater Caribbean, has been the development of tourism, the so called “industry without chimneys”, which due to its social and cultural features has been seen as a continuation of plantation under the form of resorts. The development of tourism has deeply influenced the vision of the Caribbean as a sunny place full of beaches, five-star hotels, port sectors and container movements, tax havens. Yet, scholars and researchers have started to debunk this stereotype by showing the deleterious effects it has on the economic, historical and cultural life of the peoples inhabiting the region. Among the negative effects of viewing the Caribbean in such a way is the erasing it induces of the non-coastal Caribbean, a rich and complex place, simultaneously different and similar to the littoral Caribbean.

Aware of the importance of this Caribbean “beyond the coasts”, on the cultural, political, geographic and economic levels, the Colombian Association for the Study of the Caribbean (ACOLEC) and Banco de la República invite national and international students, scholars, and researchers specialized on the Caribbean to participate in this international Conference: “The Caribbean beyond the coasts: the Rural World” to take place in Montería (Colombia), from the 25 to the 27 March 2015.

Objective

The general purposes of this Conference are to analyze and understand the dynamics of this other Caribbean world; to understand the complex social, economic, and cultural dynamics binding together the inner Caribbean with its Coastal zones, and highlight elements that often make special and ambiguous the connection between such territories.
